Your commentator is feeling pretty cocky this morning. Believe it or not, I'm staggering around with no other support but a cane—and it was easy—a few weeks ago, to picture myself hobbling through the balance of my probably mis-spent life on a pair of crutches—although I did have it narrowed down to one. Any way you look at it, it's been a liberal education, and now more than ever do I have a healthy respect for those unfortunate but indomitable souls who march cheerfully and triumphantly through life packing handicaps that would make the average person ram the garden hose in the exhaust pipe of the family jalopy and end it all. "Under the bludgeonings of chance, my head is bloody but unbowed"—that's me; although I must admit my ordinarily cheerful disposition has suffered considerably. In fact, the family has found me all but impossible.

Every now and then I run across the published remarks of some smart guy who urges the reader to subjugate his ego, and as an example of what he—the writer—is driving at, it is suggested that one get along for a few days without employing the singular personal pronoun. Follows a 30-word paragraph showing how one can say, "Oke, I'll do it," without use of that hateful cap "I." Well, all I've got to say is, the guy never tried to write a chatty column without hiding behind the editorial "we"—a practice instituted by early editorial writers to intimidate the public.

Not from any particular desire to spare my readers too close acquaintance with the Knappen ego—which some say is considerable, being a bit mixed up between ego and egotistic—but rather because I dislike to see a printed page with too many cap "I's" standing prominently forth, I spend minutes, even hours, trying to delete or omit the persistent ascender (typo).

And then again I remind myself that better men than I have had the same failing. In the case of the late Theodore Roosevelt the failing was finally proof that the invincible roughrider actually had reached the headwaters of the Amazon. His report of the feat was doubted for years, until a subsequent exploring party reached the point claimed by Teddy and found there an old Oliver typewriter whose capital "I" was worn down to a nubbin. They believed him then.

The current rubber salvage program, being the administration's abortive attempt to wean the public away from the pressing question of the national rubber shortage and the possibility of nation-wide gasoline rationing for the purpose of conserving tires, is duck soup for the kids, just out of school and rarin' to pick up a bit of small change. So far most of them have stuck to legitimate salvage, but when that gets scarce it will behoove us to keep spare tires, garden hose, etc., in se-

Free Tells of Japs' Plans for Conquest

Arthur M. Free gave a very comprehensive review of the Japanese plans for world conquest and domination of North America in a talk to the Kiwanis club Tuesday.

Even in 1916, Free asserted, imperialistic Japan proclaimed in part: "America, to any warrior race, is not a foe but an immense melon, ripe for cutting."

The material for his talk was collected by Free during the years he served as congressman, and student of Japanese history, for it was while he was in congress that legislation was enacted setting up alien land laws and changes in immigration regulations were made.

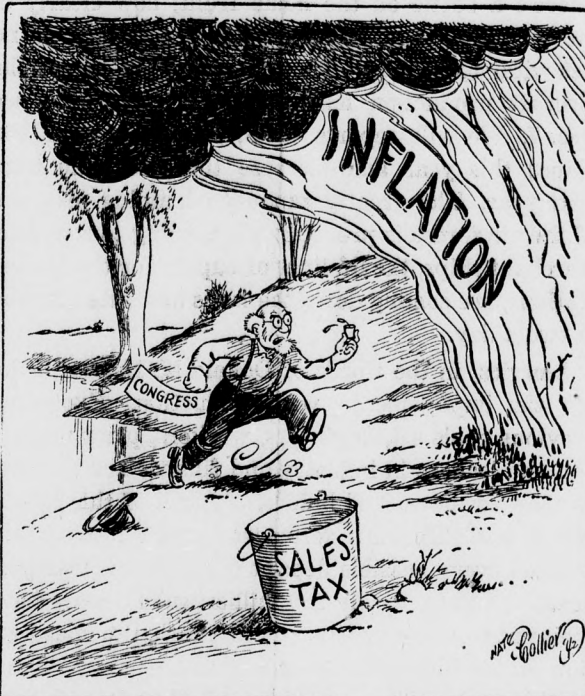

Martin S. Walsh was introductory chairman.

Next Tuesday Larry Greer of the P. G. & E., who has made a study of South America, will talk on "Brazil," and Clarence Nelson will do the honors.

Sgt. Ralph Fulton and Sgt. Kenneth Taylor were up from Camp McQuaide Sunday, visiting in Campbell.

cure places. Mind you, I'm not saying the little rascals would actually "lift" anything of value, but it's just as well—and our duty, too—to keep them away from temptation. We'll say you've an extra length of hose; it's a hot day, and ice cream and pop are pretty alluring; then remember some of the things you did when you were a kid. You see? How did they know you really wanted that hose?

LAWRENCE JANSEN
Pitcher

Larry Jansen, with only two years of professional baseball behind him, threatens to become one of the leading pitchers in the Pacific Coast league. Last year Jansen came up with 16 victories while only losing ten games, and had it not been for illness which kept him out of the game at the end of the season, might easily have achieved his 20 games in the win column. Jansen will be with the Seals when they appear in San Jose next Monday night to meet the San Jose Owls at the new municipal stadium.

DAD HAS HIS DAY

Fathers' day, on June 21, ought to remind us that dad—though seldom figuring in the news in his capacity as head of the family—is certainly not one to be overlooked. It was, we suspect, to accord the "silent partner" of family life just recognition that Fathers' day was first originated.

At any rate, there should be no disputing the rightness of a day in his honor next Sunday. Dads, by the million, have given their sons to the armed services. Not a few themselves are enrolled in the fighting forces. Legions of them are fashioning the tools, weapons and machines of war.

Virtually every one of them is quietly wrestling with the biggest tax bills mortal man ever knew, gamely seeking to spare his family all avoidable hardships. His quota of worries and responsibilities has jumped sharply in the past year, but it's not his style to make a fuss about it. Nor is it his style to expect anyone to remember him particularly next Sunday. He may consider such a "day" a lot of foolishness.

But we have a hunch he'd be pleased no end if, on Fathers' day, you gave him some token of remembrance.

CAN YOU VOTE?

July 16 is the deadline for California citizens to register to vote in the August primaries. After July 16, it will be too late.

That makes the day one of importance to every responsible citizen. This year, the ballot is a weapon for the defense and security of California—a weapon which every Californian at home must use to the best of his ability, just as the soldier overseas has the duty to use rifle and machine gun to the best of his ability.

California lies in a military combat zone in this total war. What precautions shall be taken in making California life and property as safe as possible in the circumstances, what plans shall be adopted and carried out by law, what leaders shall be vested with authority—as governor of California, and in numerous other public offices where intelligent and resolute leadership is essential in this war year—must be determined by the voters at the polls.

Soldiers, sailors and marines are eligible to vote, provided they would be eligible as civilians. That is to say, a man properly registered in his home county may use his absentee ballot from any point in the United States, just as if he were a civilian unable to be home on election day. He must, however, be in the United States. A soldier in a foreign country—Ireland, Iceland, Australia—cannot vote.

So, whether civilian or soldier, it is the Californian's duty to register for the most important election in our history as a state.

Make sure you can vote.

Then make sure you do vote!

SOMETHING TO CHEER

After six long months of silent waiting, America is cheering.

In sending a Japanese invasion fleet reeling back from Midway under the thunderous blows of American sea and air power, the nation scored a signal triumph that has instilled new fighting zeal all the way from the Pacific war front to the smallest backwoods hamlet in the Ozarks.

The past week has brought more news to cheer. There's a battle on the home front, now clearly in the winning stage, which, if less spectacular, is no less vital to victory. Though seemingly incredible, aircraft production has soared 85 per cent since Dec. 7. We will, reports WPB, produce some 60,000 planes this year and increase that awesome total next year. The greatly expanded training program of the air forces is proceeding according to schedule. Merchant ships, the lifelines of supply for the United Nations, are coming down the ways at a rate of nearly two a day.

America, in the words of Donald M. Nelson, is doing the impossible in war production. Exceeding previous goals set, engineers, workers, plant managers, and leaders in industry and finance are working as they never worked before. Typical of this all-out effort is California's foremost branch bank which enlisted every possible deposit dollar in the war program. To date, nearly 200 million such dollars have been put to work by this one institution to speed action on the huge volume of war orders concentrated in this state. These millions of "iron men" have started wheels turning for the production of every sort of war necessity—from bombs and fuses to cruisers and tankers, from war workers' homes to power plants and parachutes.

America's production battle is being won—decisively. They said it couldn't be done. But America has made a business of doing the impossible—and the unexpected, as Japan has found out to its sorrow at Midway.

THE OLD ARMY GAME

The U. S. army announces the football coach's dream team—a team with unlimited material, with every man the top cream of the nation's football talent. From millions of soldiers, the army will form two squads, East and West, and play a whirlwind schedule this fall with teams of the National Professional Football league. Proceeds will go to the Army Emergency Relief fund.

It's new—this idea of a dream team. No coach ever had a chance at such a wealth of material. Not even Rockne, not even Jones!

And yet it's old, this idea—for the army. Speaking of the way America's forces of air and sea teamed up at Midway, Sergeant Hubert Hington, ground crew chief, summed it all up:

"It was like a championship football team. We really clicked so beautifully the Japs didn't have a chance."

That's the U. S. army's team in any game—the game with the Kaiser in 1918, with the Japs and Germans now, with the game to come on the same Flanders fields when the new AEF crosses the channel. Go for that championship, in football or in war—"really click."

It'll seem like something new and different—this dream team of the football field this fall.

But it'll just be playing that same old winning army game.

Walkie-Talkie

Far in advance of the main body of troops, or off on a crest to the flank, is the observer and his "walkie-talkie" operator. Although separated by distance, he is in constant communication with his commander, reporting activities from his vantage point. Separated battalions and companies are coordinated by the same means. Although the field artilleryman's guns may be thousands of yards to the rear, the forward observer with the walkie-talkie radio can climb a tree near the front and direct fire accurately on the enemy. Better than the sniper is the radio operator who can hide in a hollow tree and bring a barrage of high-explosive shells to any target he can see.

Flooring Installed in Day

It is now possible to get a factory-finished oak flooring which is installed in one day completely finished with no dust or mess caused by the usual sanding and finishing operations. It is a longer-lasting finish that is hard to mar and the cost is approximately the same as that of ordinary hardwood flooring. The strips are a full inch wider than usual flooring and that, plus the gracefully beveled ends and edges, give a streamlined effect that is distinctive. This flooring is available in two grades.

THE BOOK MARK

Until the Day Break, Louis Bromfield.

Roxie Dawn, an American born girl, had been in Paris for some 12 or 15 years when Louis Bromfield starts her on her tour through his latest literary effort as heroine of Until the Day Break. Perhaps, as a couple readers of the story have remarked, the author delights in putting a lovely girl, in fact a perfectly gorgeous girl, and an American one at that, as the principal character in each of his always popular and fascinating books.

From our own United States, wherein lay the site of his previous book, Wild Is the River, to present day Paris, Bromfield takes us, and I promise you, in the typical, intriguing Bromfield manner.

Roxie was a member of an American dancing troupe that accepted a booking in Paris, when Paris was at the height of its gaiety in theatrical performances. Roxie, with her natural beauty, claimed the attention of an influential theater manager who helped her to fame and stardom in the field of dancing.

Until the Day Break begins action with the downfall of Paris. Roxie, her manager, Levantine d'Abrizzi, and a very few others that Roxie was acquainted with, remained in the deserted city and saw the horror of the occupation by the Nazi. The Paris that they loved was stripped of its life; its loveliness, its very soul was crushed under the heel of the invaders. Roxie thought that she could stand in her own window of her home and watch the triumphant march of the Germans, but when their marching thuds preceded them through the empty streets she fled to a hotel and buried her head in the bed to stifle the sounds of the mocking drums. d'Abrizzi, her manager, through his cunningness and keen wit, launched a successful underground movement to corrupt the Nazi power. Roxie aided the movement by playing along with the German major who was always so painfully correct and who fell hopelessly in love with her.

The reader is made to realize more keenly the bewilderment of the frustrated French. The book is teeming with suspense, and the climax is worthy of all that goes before.

CORONER SEEKS TO SUCCEED SELF

Jessie A. Spalding, coroner and public administrator of Santa Clara county, today announced her candidacy to retain the office she has held by appointment since the death of her husband, C. C. Spalding in 1939.

Mrs. Spalding is widely known throughout the county, and since she has held the office of coroner and public administrator she has been honored with the vice-presidency of the National Coroners' association and the presidency of the California State Public Administrators' association.

This year at their annual state convention, the coroners of California paid high tribute to Mrs. Spalding by designating her office one of the most efficiently and economically operated in the state.

Morticians of the county have joined in tribute to Mrs. Spalding for the fair and impartial manner in which she has handled the affairs of her office of coroner. They point to her methods as a real saving to the taxpayers, and declare her office one of the best operated in county government.

In announcing her candidacy to retain the office, Mrs. Spalding said she has no other business except that of serving the county as coroner and public administrator. She explained that her full time is devoted to the duties of the office, and that she had attempted to conduct it according to the best interests of the taxpayers of the county. "The records of my office will show," said Mrs. Spalding, "that the number of investigations and other work has increased two-fold, while

WAR GASES

By DR. WARD L. MOULD
Medical Gas Officer
U. S. Office of Civilian Defense

(This is the first of a series of six articles about war gases, their characteristics, and the measures the civilian can take to protect himself against gas injury.)

I—The Possibility of Gas Attack

The first step in the citizen's defense against war gases is to obtain a clear understanding of what gas can and cannot do. This series is designed in part to dispel some of the current misinformation about war gases.

Despite the ever increasing range and capacity of aircraft, a gas attack on a large enough scale to cause injury to a substantial portion of a large city is not regarded in authoritative quarters as feasible. Even in limited areas gas, to be effective, must be used in great quantities.

Gas might be used in an attack upon a city either alone or in conjunction with other weapons. The better citizens are trained and equipped to deal with gas the less likely it is that gas will have any appreciable effect.

Quick-acting types of gases may be used against a community to produce immediate casualties, throw the population into a state of panic and disrupt their protective services. Slow-acting types, which may remain effective for several days in a liquid form, may be used to "contaminate" important factories, railroads, highways, etc., to prevent their use. Such gases could be sprayed or sprinkled from planes in the form of a fine rain or they might be contained in bombs dropped from planes. Citizens will find it of value to know something of the varieties of gas that might be used.

EARL WARREN FOR GOVERNOR

Men outstanding in Democratic, veteran and liberal circles in California have assumed leadership in the statewide non-partisan campaign for Earl Warren for governor.

In accepting the campaign chairman ship for southern California, Raymond Haight wired Warren this week: "The war crisis makes imperative restoration of integrity to and confidence in the leadership of our state government. Your election is bound to have that result. There can be no partisanship in fighting and winning this war."

California's war-time need for resolute leadership and coming post-war need for far-sighted, sound statesmanship was stressed today by Mrs. Ruth Mahabat, past state president of the California American Legion Women's Auxiliary.

She said, "Although our chief concern today is the war, we must take a forward view and consider what part we will have to play in the post-war period."

"Earl Warren's experience, integrity, courage and freedom from partisan bias are assets the people of California must use to the full through the war crisis and in the uncharted years that will follow."

The FARMERS
CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

Approximately 3000 school districts in California are now in the process of preparing their budgets for the 1942-43 fiscal year and will complete them by July 1.

In total, the school budgets are expected to aggregate $180,000,000 or more—a tremendous expenditure, even measured by war-time standards, and it behooves both farm groups and individual taxpayers to take time out immediately to study the budgets proposed in their respective districts.

In considering a school budget, the first information to look for, of course, is the trend of enrollment, for the number of pupils measures the work to be done. If the enrollment is up, expenditures may be expected to follow; if it is down, the same rule should apply, but costs seldom go down as easily as they go up and substantial reductions in overhead cannot be expected if taxpayers are lacking in vigilance.

With older boys going into the armed forces by the thousands, and with both boys and girls leaving school to take jobs in war industries, high schools and junior colleges have lost heavily in enrollment during the past year—and there is no reason to expect a return to previous levels until after the war.

Elementary enrollment, on the other hand, is up for the state as a whole, but the increase is not uniform in all sections. In fact, many districts that do not have war industries have lost pupils in their elementary schools, due to the movement of families to industrial centers. But in areas where war industries are centered there has generally been an increase in the number of elementary pupils. The evacuation of Japanese has also drastically affected some districts, as some 20,000 Japanese children have been moved to other areas.

For the farm group, civic group, or taxpayer intent upon checking school budgets, here are other important factors to be taken into consideration this year:

1. School building programs have been completely disrupted by the war. This will work little hardship where enrollment has decreased, but is a serious problem near industrial centers where some elementary schools are greatly over-crowded and obliged to run two shifts. The impossibility of starting new construction or finishing buildings already started should bring reductions in many school district tax rates, but that result will not come automatically. There will be the undoubted temptation to keep the district rate at the same level and use the money to raise salaries or build up reserves. This is an instance where taxpayers, who are already heavily burdened with war taxes, need to make their influence felt.

2. War-time restrictions will also reduce the amounts which can or should be spent for many miscellaneous items, as typewriters, office equipment of all kinds, desks, playground equipment, paper, pencils, and many other small items which add up to big figures. This should be taken into account in figuring budget allocations for equipment and supplies.

In addition, school transportation costs will or should be reduced as a result of the shortage of rubber and new motor vehicles. While school buses are entitled to tires (if available) for use in the direct transportation of pupils to and from school, the use of school buses to carry children to athletic events is prohibited.

On July 1 or before, the district board must submit a tentative budget to the county superintendent of schools. On July 15, the superintendent must return the budget to the local board with or without suggested changes. By July 20 the board must return the budget to the superintendent. If the district employs more than one teacher and proposes to levy a tax, the budget must be published and a public hearing held during the first week in August; otherwise no public hearing is required and the budget becomes final on its return to the superintendent on July 20. The county board of supervisors has no authority over school matters but merely levies whatever tax rate is required by the budget.

HEALTH-BUILDING MINERALS

This is a message to Victory Garden growers and all vegetable and fruit loving Californians. Cook these healthful natural foods to preserve their full nutritive values. You will be repaid by greater flavorfulness, more appetite appeal, more health-giving energies.

Follow these simple rules to get the most out of the fruits and vegetables you cook.

1. Use short cooking time. Do not add baking soda to preserve color as it destroys minerals and vitamins.
2. Use little or no water. Excessive water boils away the nutritive values in fresh foods.
3. Start ALL vegetables in boiling water.
4. Cook all vegetables as nearly whole as possible.
